It was earlier this year when Adobe unveiled its AI-powered technology at the Adobe Max conference. The company demonstrated the new tools in an exhibition entitled 'Photoshop for AI and Machine Learning', which included pastel sculptures in the shape of a face, a sculpture created with geometry transformations, a life-size painting of a raccoon, a face-eaten cat mesa inspired by Guillermo del Toro's Hellboy, and AI-based photo retouchers. Phong shading technology lets you add shadows, highlights, backlights, and reflections, as well as modify these properties after you've applied them to objects—such as a face or table. It's an important change, as many photographers had previously had to do this in Photoshop after the initial photo editing process. They can now change the reflected light and shadows in an image after it's been adjusted, saving time and effort. Photoshop also fuses AI, machine learning, and traditional artistic training to make a powerful tool of its own. One of the first examples was a project to identify and remove prominent creases from portraits. The software uses a machine learning system to recognize the features that cause a crease in the skin. Photographers can either select or let the software remove the creases after the fact. AI-powered filters have been a phenomenon since the inception of Photoshop on personal computers. There are now AI-powered filters in Photoshop, and the company says more such filters are on the way.
